There are so many Titanfall machines on this server, that something as trivial as at least returning the 3rd character from a loading screen seems quite simple to implement, even if only by accident. I know there is a bias on Hacker News, but it would be good if you guys shared your concerns. What to do? 1. Not reporting the bug This is a terrible idea. If your title said "Bug, but not reported" it would be an absolute fail. The first thing someone would do when they read a topic like this is to skip over you, and then report it. That is a clear sign of bad faith, because you are promising something that is not. It is what I would call "bad faith", meaning you do not care at all that you are misrepresenting yourself. Someone who does care about their reputation might feel "punished", because they do not want to be caught. Even if you think that it is worth it, there are good reasons to report a bug: - you now know the feature has a bug, and could thus potentially prevent it from being discovered in the future - it gives the developers a reason to investigate the reports, so that you can get a response - etc.
